We are fully committed to quality and can think of no better way of expressing how we will approach the issue of quality in our own work than by reference to two of the ISO's guiding principles:

- Transparency: All essential information regarding work planning, work under progress and final results should be made easily accessible to all interested parties and throughout all stages of the project. This entails establishing a comprehensive communications strategy for the project. This we have planned to do
- Openness: We are fully committed to the structured engagement of the primary and secondary stakeholders in the project and we will ensure that there is continuous communication and consultation with them throughout the lifetime of the project
